COVID-19

COVID-19 Vaccinations

As of October 29, 89.8% (4,163,572) of eligible people 12+ in B.C. have received their first dose of COVID-19 vaccine and 85.0% (3,940,563) have received their second dose.

On October 26, the government announced the next steps in the province's COVID-19 immunization plan, which involved booster shots for the general population. The priority is B.C.'s elderly and most at-risk population, who will receive invitations to book a booster dose between September and December 2021. Beginning in January 2022, the plan expands to include all British Columbians.

Proof of full vaccination is required to access some events, services, and business in British Columbia. This requirement applies to all people born in 2009 or earlier (12+). As of October 26, more than 3.6 million British Columbians have accessed their BC Vaccine Card.

Help shape B.C.'s anti-racism data legislation

B.C. is drafting anti-racism data legislation, so that the government can better identify existing gaps and create a more equitable province. The public consultation will help inform government about how to collect data in a way that is reflective of the needs and experiences of Indigenous, Black and people of colour (IBPOC) communities. The public engagement will run until November 30 and will be available in multiple languages.
